Toast at Social Lunch with the President of China
Thursday, April 20, 2006
Draft #2

Mr. President, Mrs. Liu – Laura and I are honored to welcome you to the White House. It is a pleasure to have you here, along with our other distinguished guests.

China is home to an ancient civilization, and it is helping to shape the modern world. In a single generation, China's economy has moved from isolation and stagnation to engagement and dynamism. China has become stronger as its people have experienced the freedom to buy, to sell, and to produce – and China will grow even stronger as its people enjoy even greater freedom.

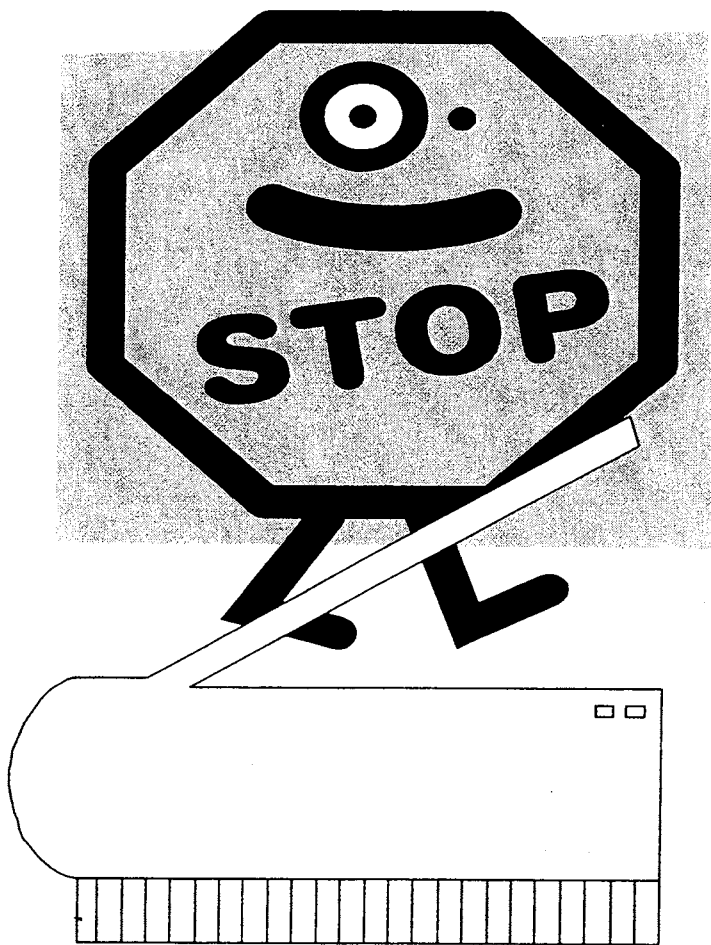

As China has grown, our two peoples have come to know one another better. Thirty-five years ago this month, the Chinese government welcomed the U.S. ping-pong team to Beijing – an event that marked the beginning of renewed cultural exchanges between our two nations. Today, a Chinese superstar plays for the Houston Rockets, and is an honored guest today. Yao Ming, thank you for coming -- you are living proof that things are bigger in Texas!

In 2008, China will welcome athletes from all over the world as your great nation hosts the Summer Olympics. Beijing will showcase China's transformation – and demonstrate China's commitment to the international institutions that make fair and peaceful competition possible for all nations.

Mr. President, I thank you for our candid conversation this morning. I appreciate the opportunity to extend the dialogue between our two great nations. And on behalf of the people of the United States, I am pleased to offer a toast to you and to your gracious wife, Madam Liu.

Toast at Social Lunch with the President of China
Thursday, April 20, 2006
Draft #2

Mr. President, Mrs. Liu – Laura and I are honored to welcome you to the White House. It is a pleasure to have you here, along with our other distinguished guests.

China is home to an ancient civilization, and it is helping to shape the modern world. In a single generation, China's economy has moved from isolation and stagnation to engagement and dynamism. China has become stronger as its people have experienced the freedom to buy, to sell, and to produce – and China will grow even stronger as its people enjoy even greater freedom.

As China has grown, our two peoples have come to know one another better. Thirty-five years ago this month, the Chinese government welcomed the U.S. ping-pong team to Beijing – an event that marked the beginning of renewed cultural exchanges between our two nations. Today, a Chinese superstar plays for the Houston Rockets, and is an honored guest today. Yao Ming, thank you for coming -- you are living proof that things are bigger in Texas!

is here to say
out loud*

In 2008, China will welcome athletes from all over the world as your great nation hosts the Summer Olympics. Beijing will showcase China's transformation – and demonstrate China's commitment to the international institutions that make fair and peaceful competition possible for all nations.

Mr. President, I thank you for our candid conversation this morning. I appreciate the opportunity to extend the dialogue between our two great nations. And on behalf of the people of the United States, I am pleased to offer a toast to you and to your gracious wife, Madam Liu.

Mr. President, Mrs. Liu – Laura and I are honored to welcome you to the White House. It is a pleasure to have you here, along with our other distinguished guests.

China is home to an ancient civilization, and it is helping to shape the modern world. In a single generation, China's economy has moved from isolation and stagnation to engagement and dynamism. As China has grown, our two peoples have come to know one another better. Toast at Social Lunch with the President of China
Thursday, April 20, 2006
Draft #2

and the delegation from your country

Mr. President, Mrs. Liu - Laura and I are honored to welcome you to the White House. It is a pleasure to have you here, along with our other distinguished guests.

China is home to an ancient civilization, and it is helping to shape the modern world. In a single generation, China's economy has moved from isolation and stagnation to engagement and dynamism. China has become stronger as its people have experienced the freedom to buy, to sell, and to produce - and China will grow even stronger as its people enjoy even greater freedom.

As China has grown, our two peoples have come to know one another better. Thirty-five years ago this month, the Chinese government welcomed the U.S. ping-pong team to Beijing - an event that marked the beginning of renewed cultural exchanges between our two nations. Today, a Chinese superstar plays for the Houston Rockets, and is an honored guest today. Yao Ming, thank you for coming -- you are living proof that things are bigger in Texas!

In 2008, China will welcome athletes from all over the world as your great nation hosts the Summer Olympics. Beijing will showcase China's transformation - and demonstrate China's commitment to the international institutions that make fair and peaceful competition possible for all nations.

Mr. President, I thank you for our candid conversation this morning. I appreciate the opportunity to extend the dialogue between our two great nations. And on behalf of the people of the United States, I am pleased to offer a toast to you and to your gracious wife, Madam Liu.

Dear Mr. President:

I am honored to have been your guest at the White House last month, and I want to thank you and Laura for hosting me for lunch. I thoroughly enjoyed our visit and our wide-ranging conversation.

I was pleased to hear your encouraging words about progress with the MCA and PEPFAR thus far. Our foundation will continue to speak out about the importance of these and other global health and development initiatives.

Although the main purpose of our meeting was to discuss global health and development, I was very pleased that we were able to discuss high school reform efforts. As you suggested, foundation staff have forwarded a list of what we consider to be model schools to Secretary Spellings in case she or you are able to visit at some point.

Again, thank you for a delightful lunch.

Sincerely,

Bill

P.S. I look forward to getting together again sometime!

Dear President Bush:

It was a great honor and a great treat to have lunch with you, and many thanks for the signed photos, which we just received. For my children, the day was an especially great treat, one that will give them treasured memories to last a lifetime. My five-year-old, Nathaniel, when he's not talking about how you sent an army halfway across the world to "get rid of that bad guy," still insists that you should be president for "another hundred years."

I'm confident that your memoirs will be a vitally important document for history and the rich legacy of your administration, as well as a gift to future generations trying to make sense of the tumultuous world that our nation was thrust into in the aftermath of 9/11. I'm equally confident that every bit as much as U.S. Grant's, if not more so, they will stand the test of time, read not simply fifty years hence, but one hundred and fifty and beyond. As I mentioned, I would be thrilled and honored to have the opportunity to be of help to you in any way I can; now having had the benefit of hearing some of your thoughts, I am beginning the process of filing away ideas that may be of assistance.

All best wishes,
