27th September, 2005

Dear Mr. President,

Watching from afar, both my wife and myself have felt nothing but the greatest possible sympathy and concern for all those who have been caught up in the indescribable horror of the recent hurricanes which have wreaked such appalling devastation in the United States of America.

Although hopelessly inadequate in the circumstances, we wanted you to know that our hearts go out to you and the American people as you battle against the forces of Nature and struggle to repair the awful damage in the aftermath of these storms. Please know that you are all much in our thoughts and prayers at such a difficult, dangerous and heartbreaking time.

Yours most sincerely
