A Year Down Yonder (Newbery Medal Book, 2001)
by Richard Peck

From Horn Book This sequel to Peck's Newbery Honor-winning A Long Way from Chicago (rev. 11/98) is narrated by the formidable Grandma Dowdel's granddaughter Mary Alice, who is now fifteen and has been sent to live (or fend for herself, as she sees it) with Grandma after her father loses his job in Chicago—a casualty of the 1937 recession. Grandma is still dispensing her own brand of justice in her small Illinois town, and, as before, Mary Alice soon finds herself an accomplice to many of Grandma's brazen schemes—and even boldly hatches a few of her own. While the escapades are diverting, the seven stories, which span the school year, don't have the cumulative power of those in A Long Way from Chicago. Grandma, who was an indefatigable source of surprise and bewilderment to her grandchildren in the first book, doesn't come across as such a mythic figure this time around, perhaps because some of her shock value has worn off. The humor here is subdued but much in evidence, and a few overly sentimental moments don't detract much from the narrative. Peck presents memorable characters in a satisfying sequel, and those looking to be entertained once again by Grandma Dowdel will enjoy their visit. Copyright © 2000 The Horn Book, Inc. Book Description It was within the pages of Richard Peck's Newbery Honor-winning A Long Way from Chicago that Mary Alice and Grandma Dowdel first made their captivating debut. Now they're back for more astonishing, laugh-out-loud adventures when fifteen-year-old Mary Alice moves in with her spicy grandmother for the year. Expect moonlit schemes, romances both foiled and founded, and a whole parade of fools made to suffer in unusual (and always hilarious) ways.

Wise, exuberant, and slyly heartwarming, Mary Alice's story is a fully satisfying companion to the celebrated A Long Way from Chicago, which, in addition to receiving the Newbery Honor, was a National Book Award finalist, an ALA Notable Book, and an ALA Best Book for Young Adults.

National Book Festival

The very first National Book Festival takes place this Saturday on the grounds of the Capitol and the Library of Congress. Come and join Mrs. Bush at 9:30 AM as she launches this free day-long celebration of writers and books:

Mrs. Bush Kicks Off Celebration of America's Authors with National Book Festival

"America is blessed with a wealth of gifted writers who take their inspiration from our diverse landscape, history, people and dreams, and weave rich tapestries with their words.

"Through their prose and poetry, American writers enrich and inform our lives. They help us explore our past and contemplate our future, and their words are a living legacy to us all.

"In America, where we want all our children to read, the creations of writers and artists are nourishment for the minds of generations to come."

First Lady Laura Bush

➤ On Saturday, September 8, First Lady Laura Bush joins the Library of Congress in hosting the very first National Book Festival in celebration of America's writers, libraries and the sheer joy of reading.

➤ The National Book Festival is modeled upon the hugely successful Texas Book Festival that Mrs. Bush launched in 1996.

➤ At 9:30 AM on Saturday, Mrs. Bush will launch the day-long festivities in a ceremony at the Neptune Plaza of the Library of Congress.

➤ The Festival runs from 10 AM until 5 PM on the east grounds of the U.S. Capitol and the Library of Congress. The Festival is free and open to the public and features:
