White House Reception for the National Day of Prayer
May 2, 2002
Draft #11

Today we continue a tradition that is as old as the Nation itself: setting aside a day in which Americans are encouraged to pray for their neighbors and the Nation. The National Day of Prayer is a vital part of our national heritage because prayer is a vital part of our national life. I am grateful to all of you who remind us that a great people must spend time on bended knee, in humility, searching for wisdom in the presence of the Almighty.

Acknowledgments

- Mrs. Laura Bush (will introduce the President)
- The Heritage Signature Chorale and its Music Director Dr. Stanley Thurston (will perform prior to the entrance of the First Lady and President and then again after the President speaks)
- Amy Burton, Soloist, New York City Opera
- Shirley Dobson, Chair, National Day of Prayer Task Force
- Dr. Lloyd Ogilvie, United States Senate Chaplain (will read the Prayer for America)
- Father Daniel Coughlin [COG-lin], United States House of Representatives Chaplain (will deliver the closing prayer)

When the First Continental Congress met at Carpenters Hall in Philadelphia, one of its first official acts was prayer. In 1779 the Day of Prayer Proclamation asked that Almighty God would grant "the Blessings of Peace to all contending Nations, Freedom to those who are in Bondage, and Comfort to the Afflicted."

During our Nation's darkest hour, our Nation's greatest President called America back to prayer. President Lincoln urged his fellow citizens to look to the "redeeming and preserving grace" of God. And Americans wisely accepted Abraham Lincoln's counsel.

America is a country of faith – and throughout our history, in times of calm and crisis, Americans have always turned to prayer. And this year's event has special meaning.

Since the attacks of September 11th, millions of Americans of every religious faith have been led to pray. They have prayed for comfort in a time of sorrow ... for courage in a time of fear ... and for understanding in a time of anger. They have prayed for wisdom in the midst of war – and for strength on the journey ahead.

These prayers have been made in private homes and in houses of worship, alone and with others, in moments of doubt and times of thanksgiving. These prayers have been heartfelt – and they have made a tremendous difference.

Prayer for others is a generous act. It sweeps away bitterness and heals old wounds. Prayer leads to greater humility and a more grateful spirit. It strengthens our commitment to things that last and matter. And it deepens our love for one another.

Prayer also deepens faith – reminding us of great truths: evil and suffering are only for a time, and love and hope endure. Even in the world's most bitter conflicts, prayer reminds us of God's love and grace, His mercy and faithfulness, the hope He provides, and peace He promises.

Prayer is central to the lives of countless Americans, including Laura's and mine. We have been blessed by the prayers of millions of Americans – and we could ask for no greater gift from our countrymen.

Thank you all for coming here to the White House to celebrate this special day ... for your devotion to prayer ... and for your love for this country and for the Lord who has blessed it for so long and so well.

God bless you all.

White House Reception for the National Day of Prayer
May 2, 2002
Draft #11

Today we continue a tradition that is as old as the Nation itself: setting aside a day in which Americans are encouraged to pray for their neighbors and the Nation. The National Day of Prayer is a vital part of our national heritage because prayer is a vital part of our national life. I am grateful to all of you who remind us that a great people must spend time on bended knee, in humility, searching for wisdom in the presence of the Almighty.

Acknowledgments

- Mrs. Laura Bush (will introduce the President)
- The Heritage Signature Chorale and its Music Director Dr. Stanley Thurston (will perform prior to the entrance of the First Lady and President and then again after the President speaks)
- Amy Burton, Soloist, New York City Opera
- Shirley Dobson, Chair, National Day of Prayer Task Force
- Dr. Lloyd Ogilvie, United States Senate Chaplain (will read the Prayer for America)
- Father Daniel Coughlin [COG-lin], United States House of Representatives Chaplain (will deliver the closing prayer)

When the First Continental Congress met at Carpenters Hall in Philadelphia, one of its first official acts was prayer. In 1779 the Day of Prayer Proclamation asked that Almighty God would grant "the Blessings of Peace to all contending Nations, Freedom to those who are in Bondage, and Comfort to the Afflicted."

During our Nation's darkest hour, our Nation's greatest President called America back to prayer. President Lincoln urged his fellow citizens to look to the "redeeming and preserving grace" of God. And Americans wisely accepted Abraham Lincoln's counsel.

America is a country of faith – and throughout our history, in times of calm and crisis, Americans have always turned to prayer. And this year's event has special meaning.

White House Reception for the National Day of Prayer
May 2, 2002
Draft #5

Acknowledgments

Today we continue a tradition that is as old as the Nation itself: setting aside a day in which Americans are encouraged to pray for their neighbors and their Nation. America is a religious country – and throughout our history, in times of calm and crisis, Americans have always turned to prayer. But this year's event has special meaning.

Since the attacks of September 11th, millions of Americans of every religious faith have been led to pray. They have prayed for comfort in a time of sorrow ... for courage in a time of fear ... and for understanding in a time of anger. They have prayed for wisdom in the midst of war – and for strength on the journey ahead.

These prayers have been made in private homes and in great cathedrals, alone and with others, in moments of doubt and thanksgiving. These prayers have been heartfelt – and they have made a tremendous difference.

Prayer for others is a generous act. It sweeps away bitterness and heals old wounds. Prayer leads to greater humility and a more grateful spirit. It strengthens our commitment to things that last and matter. And it deepens our love for one another.

Prayer also deepens faith – and faith reminds us of great truths: evil and hardships are for a time ... peace and hope endure ... and all suffering will be redeemed. And prayer is a means of worship. It brings us into the presence of the Almighty. It reminds us of God's love and grace, His mercy and faithfulness, the peace He bestows and the hope He provides.

Prayer is central to the lives of countless Americans, including Laura's and mine. Laura and I have been blessed by the prayers of millions of Americans – and we could ask for no greater gift from our countrymen.

Thank you all for coming here to the White House to celebrate this special day ... for your devotion to prayer ... and for your love for this country and for the Lord who has blessed it for so long and so well.

God bless you all.
