Welcoming Ceremony for President Fox
September 5, 2001
Draft #9

'01 SEP 4 PM 7:54

President and Mrs. Fox, members of the Mexican delegation, distinguished guests, on behalf of the American people, it is my great honor to welcome you to the United States. [PAUSE]

Mexico was the first country I visited as President. Today, it is my privilege to welcome President Fox for the first state visit of my Administration. This is a recognition that the United States has no more important relationship in the world than the one we have with Mexico. [PAUSE]

The starting point of a sound foreign policy is to build a stable and prosperous neighborhood with good relations among neighbors. Good neighbors work together and benefit from each other's success. [PAUSE]

Mr. President, you are a Mexican patriot with a great vision for a great people – a vision of justice and prosperity. Your election signaled a new birth of freedom for Mexico, and set an example for the entire world. The United States is proud to stand beside you as your partner and your friend. [PAUSE]

Our nations have an historic opportunity: to build an authentic partnership grounded in trust and freedom. Since 1994, the free trade agreement among our two countries and Canada has created millions of jobs and lifted millions of lives. [PAUSE] NAFTA stands as a model for the benefits that are possible when trade is free and open. Today, our two nations are working together to extend the benefits of free trade throughout our hemisphere and throughout the world. [PAUSE]

Our common interests, however, extend far beyond commerce. We value the cultural contributions each nation makes to the other. We treasure the family ties that bind so many millions of our citizens. We understand that the border we share is a vibrant region that unites us. [PAUSE] We understand that our two nations must work together in a spirit of respect and common purpose to seize opportunities and tackle challenges on the issues that affect the lives of our citizens, including migration, the environment, drugs, crime, corruption, and education.

[PAUSE]

And both our governments share a great project: a fully democratic Western Hemisphere that grows in prosperity and trades in freedom. Some have described the century just past as the American Century. Now we look forward. We have a chance to build a Century of the Americas – in which all our people, North and South, find the blessings of liberty. This goal is worthy of our two great nations. [PAUSE]

A Mexican proverb tells us that “quien tiene buen vecino tiene buen amigo” [kee-EN tee-YEH-neh bwehn veh-SEE-no tee-YEH-neh bwehn ah-MEE-go] – “he who has a good neighbor has a good friend.” Today, both our countries are committed to being good neighbors, and good friends. Friends deal in good faith and disagree with respect. Friends stick together – in good times and bad. [PAUSE] Most of all, friends bring out the best in each other. Today, Mexico and the United States are bringing out the best in each other: in commerce, in culture, and in our shared commitment to democratic values. [PAUSE]

We are building a relationship that is unique in the world – a relationship of unprecedented closeness and cooperation. And this visit is a milestone on that journey. [PAUSE]

President Fox, in February you welcomed me into your home in Guanajuato [gwah-nah-HWAH-toe]. Today, Laura and I – and the American people – are honored to welcome you and Mrs. Fox to the White House and to our country. Thank you for coming.

Drafted by: John Gibson, Office of Speechwriting/NSC
Office: 202/456-9378

DROP BY MISSILE DEFENSE BRIEFING FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Wednesday, September 5, 2001
5:00 pm – 5:05 pm
Roosevelt Room
Nicholas E. Calio

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
9/5/01

I. PURPOSE

To drop by Secretary of Defense Don Rumsfeld's briefing on missile defense for Republican Members of the House of Representatives.

II. BACKGROUND

Over the next several weeks, the House and Senate will consider your budget request for defense. Congress will vigorously debate whether to provide the full amount of defense spending that you have requested. An important component of that debate will be your budget request for national missile defense. Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld will conduct a series of classified briefings at the White House for Members of Congress, outlining the need for national missile defense because of the threats posed by other nations to the United States.

III. PARTICIPANTS

See attachment.

IV. PRESS PLAN

Closed.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Members of Congress will arrive in the West Lobby, via the northwest entrance, where they will be greeted by the Office of Legislative Affairs staff and escorted to the Roosevelt Room.

VI. REMARKS

At your discretion.

TALKING POINTS
DROP BY MISSILE DEFENSE BRIEFING FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

- I appreciate you coming by to get this briefing from Secretary Rumsfeld on missile defense. I've been very clear about my priorities in the budget – and defense is clearly a top priority for me.
- I hope you'll appreciate after seeing this briefing that the threats posed by other nations are very real. I urge you to provide the funds I have requested for defense early in the budget process.

Toast
Post-Entertainment Remarks

State Dinner Toast
September 5, 2001
Draft #10

Mr. President and Mrs. Fox: On behalf of the American people, Laura and I welcome you to the United States, and to the White House.

This is a state dinner. It is also a family gathering. The most important ties between your country and mine, Mr. President, go beyond economics, politics, or geography: they are ties of heritage, and culture, and family. This is true for millions of Mexican and American families -- including my own.

The Mexican people have changed and enriched America. Together, our nations are now working to strengthen the Americas.

A long border lies between us, but it does not divide us. Nearly one million people cross that border every day. A quarter-trillion dollars worth of trade crosses it every year. Because of the visionary NAFTA agreement of 1994, the trade between us crosses in ever-greater freedom. That is a benefit to both our peoples, and a model to the world.

A sound foreign policy begins by ensuring the safety and security of the neighborhood we share. A good neighborhood is made by good neighbors. And good neighbors work, as we are working, with shared obligations and mutual respect.

Mr. President, you and I are keeping the pledges we made in Guanajuato [gwah-nah-HWAH-toe] this past winter: to expand the freedom of trade; to build an equitable prosperity; and to honor the rule of law.

We have before us a great prospect: An era of prosperity in a hemisphere of liberty. In this task, our cooperation is broad and unprecedented. Our sense of trust is strong and growing.

A century and a half ago, another occupant of this house, Abraham Lincoln, paused in the darkest hour of this country's history to send a word of hope to Mexico. Lincoln knew how closely the fates of our two countries were linked -- and he never lost faith in the characters of our two peoples. In April of 1861, he directed his Secretary of State to tell Mexico of his "high respect" for the "heroism of her people, and, above all, their inextinguishable love of civil liberty."

My message to the Mexican people is the same. The respect of my Nation endures – and deepens.

The United States has no more important relationship in the world than our relationship with Mexico. Each of our countries is proud of our independence, our freedom, and our democracy. We are united by values, and carried forward by common hopes.

And so Mr. President, speaking friend to friend, partner to partner, and neighbor to neighbor: I offer a toast to you, to your gracious wife, and to your great Nation.

State Dinner Remarks Following Entertainment
September 5, 2001
Draft #5

We've arranged a special ending to this evening, and in a moment Laura and I will ask you to join us on the Blue Room Balcony to watch fireworks over the mall. Before we do that, on behalf of the First Lady, our state visitors, and all of our guests, I thank Dawn Upshaw for sharing her beautiful gifts with us this evening. And Stephen Prutsman, the piano in the East Room has rarely sounded better.

We thank you all for being here, especially those who have accompanied the President and Mrs. Fox from Mexico. We're honored by the presence of Cabinet members from both countries. Also with us is the distinguished Chief Justice of the United States. Mr. Chief Justice, thank you for being here this evening.

This has been a memorable and eventful day. Relations between Mexico and the United States have never been stronger. We have always been neighbors. We have long been friends. And now we have prepared the way for an era of unprecedented cooperation and good will.

Mr. President, again I thank you and your gracious wife for honoring us with your visit. The American people – and their President – have great admiration for you, and for what you are working to accomplish for the people of Mexico. You came here having many friends in this country. When your visit is concluded, you will have even more.

We have much work ahead of us, tomorrow and beyond. But we already have reason to celebrate. So I invite everyone now to join us on the Blue Room Balcony for the fireworks.
