Iftaar Dinner Remarks
Wednesday, September 17, 2008
Draft #6

Good evening, and welcome. Over the past eight years, we have made Iftaar dinner an annual tradition here at the White House. At this year's gathering, we pay special tribute to the many contributions Muslim Americans have made to our Nation. And we join you in wishing Muslims around the world, "Ramadan Mubarak."¹

Acknowledgments

- [TK]

According to the teachings of Islam, Ramadan commemorates the revelation of God's word in the Holy Koran to the prophet Mohammad. That word has become the foundation for one of the world's great religions. And today more than a billion Muslims across the globe celebrate the month of Ramadan with daily fasting, heartfelt prayer, and acts of charity.

During Ramadan, we are reminded of Islam's long and distinguished history. Throughout the centuries, the Islamic world has been home to great centers of learning and culture. Muslim thinkers and scientists have advanced the frontiers of human knowledge. And people of all faiths have benefited from the achievements of Muslims in fields from philosophy and poetry to mathematics and medicine.

At the beginning of a new century, Muslims in the United States are continuing this proud tradition of innovation and invention. Tonight we honor members of the Muslim community who have risen to the top of their professions. We admire their talent, ingenuity, and determination. And we thank them for joining us tonight.

One of those innovators is Professor Maysam Ghovanloo [may-SAHM go-VAHN-loo] [present]. This immigrant from Iran has become one of our Nation's most distinguished biomedical engineers. Last month, Professor Ghovanloo [go-VAHN-loo] and his team of researchers at Georgia Tech unveiled an incredible invention that could one day help people with severe disabilities operate wheelchairs and surf the Internet by simply moving their tongue. Through his pioneering research, Professor Ghovanloo [go-VAHN-loo] has brought new hope to thousands – and he has earned the admiration of all Americans.

Stories like Professor Ghovanloo's [go-VAHN-loo's] remind us that one of the great strengths of our Nation is its religious diversity. Our citizens represent many different faiths. But we all share a belief in the right to worship freely. We reject bigotry in all its forms. And over the past eight years, my Administration has been proud to work closely with Muslim Americans to promote justice and tolerance for all faiths.

We have also partnered with Muslims around the world to spread freedom to lands that have never before known its blessings. We are helping the people of Iraq and Afghanistan build free societies after decades of tyranny. And during this month of reflection, we remember all the brave Muslim Americans who wear the uniform of the United States Armed Forces. They represent the best of our Nation – and I am honored to be their Commander in Chief.

As we break the fast tonight, let us give thanks for all those who serve a cause greater than themselves. Let us give thanks for the many ways that Muslim Americans have enriched our lives. And let us give thanks that we live in a country that makes one people out of many.

I thank you for joining us tonight. I wish you all a blessed Ramadan. And now the Imam will say the blessing.

Dear Mr. President

It was truly an honor for my husband and I to attend the state dinner for President and Mrs. Kufour of Ghana. Thank you for inviting us to participate in such a special occasion.

It was an added privilege to be seated next to you at dinner and to meet the other guests at the table.

I also wish to take this opportunity to thank you again for appointing me and giving me the opportunity to continue to serve the citizens of DC as a judge on the Court of Appeals. Anna Blackburne-Rigsby

Mr. President / Mrs. Bush:

Re: Follow-Up from Dinner

According to a preliminary search of our records, President-elect Obama has been to the White House seven times while you've been in office. Three events were in the residence, and four were in the West Wing. (Details below.)

The only time President-elect Obama has been to the Private Residence was for a May 26, 2005 meeting on CAFTA in the Yellow Oval Room in a bipartisan group of 14 Senators.

Residence interactions

11/18/04: Breakfast for newly-elected Senators (Old Family Dining Room)
01/03/05: Reception for newly-elected Sens/Reps + spouses (State Floor)
05/26/05: Bipartisan CAFTA meeting (Yellow Oval)

West Wing interactions

01/25/2006: Bipartisan Senate GWOT meeting (Roosevelt Room)
04/25/2006: Bipartisan Senate Immigration meeting (Cabinet Room)
01/05/2007: Bipartisan Senate Iraq meeting (Cabinet Room)
09/25/2008: Bipartisan Bicameral EESA meeting (Cabinet Room)

Dear President Bush,

Maryellen and I would like to genuinely thank you for honoring us by inviting us to have a wonderful dinner with you, the First Lady and Italian Prime Minister, Silvio Berlusconi.

We appreciate your kindness, generosity and thoughtfulness. We felt extremely privileged to have dinner with two great presidents, one from my parents' homeland and one from ours.

Thank you so much for your many kindnesses and tremendous leadership during these challenging times. My best wishes to you Laura and your family for your continued good health, happiness and success.

Warm personal regards,
