WOMEN'S COUNCIL RECEPTION

Talking Points for Drop-by to U.S.-Afghan Women's Council Reception

- The United States government is committed to protecting the rights of Afghan women and helping them become active participants in government, the economy, and civil society.
- In 2002, President Karzai and I launched the U.S.-Afghan Women's Council to support projects that Afghan women identify as the most important in the areas of political and economic participation, literacy, and education, as well as legal awareness and access to health care.
- I am proud of the work that Laura has done with the Council as its Honorary Chair. The women of Afghanistan are very special to her and I know that she will continue to focus on them when we are back in Texas.
- Thank you for your work with the U.S.-Afghan Women's Council. I am pleased that the Council is transferring to Georgetown University and appreciate that they will assume leadership starting in January so that the good work of the Council can continue. I see that Georgetown's President Jack DeGioia (de JOY-ah) is here today. Thank you for taking on this important project and for Georgetown's commitment to the people of Afghanistan.
- I would also like to thank [Afghan] Ambassador Said Jawad (Say-EED Ja-WAD) and his wife Shamim (Sha-MEEM), who are here today. Thank you for your continued friendship.
